

Who's afraid of Red Riding Hood?

One day Little Red Riding Hood decided to visit her Gran. She put down her book. She pulled out a pudding her mother had cooked from the cupboard. Then she put it in a picnic hamper.

When the hamper was full, she got her red riding hood and set off into the wood. She ran along the path and over the brook. She heard the rooks calling in the trees. All this time, she knew she should be looking out for the wolf.

But, before she could reach her Gran's house, the wolf jumped out from behind a bush. "Good!" he said, as he pulled the hamper away from Little Red Riding Hood with a hook.

Little Red Riding hood took out her magic wand, shook it at him and shouted, "You are such a crook! I wouldn't do that if I were you. I'll turn you into a woodlouse!"

The wolf looked at the wand, dropped the stolen goods and took to his heels. He thought he would never go near Little Red Riding Hood again. That kid was trouble!

